Hey all!

I am sorry that this email is getting out so late to you all. I have some ideas about the Company of the Year. I spoke with Dean Rathbone and asked him what company he had in mind. He said that Andersen Consulting would be a good candidate. The only problem is that normally, the president or another high- position employee of the company of the year is a K-State graduate, and is named the man of the year. Andersen Consulting has only just started hiring K-State Engineers within the last ten years, so no K-State graduate is at the top of the corporate ladder yet. However, this is not a big deal. If we choose Andersen Consulting, we could just have one or two K-State graduates from Andersen Consulting attend the banquet along with the president or vice-president, or who ever. Dean Rathbone also thought that Citgo would be good for the Company of the Year. The President of Citgo (I would mention his name, but I have forgotten it) is a K-State graduate. Either Citgo or Andersen Consulting would be good, though. Dean Rathbone said that it might be hard for us to decide on a Company of the Year without Dean King's help. But he is always willing to help us out if we need it.

Well, that is about it for now. Dean Rathbone and I are steadily working on corporate donations. We are going to try to get $6000 for the National Convention. I hope you all have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year! I know that I will!
